Welcome to the Spring 2018 SSBA newsletter.

Firstly a huge thank you to those of you who have contributed reports, reviews and other items for inclusion in this newsletter. However, we do need more to maintain the newsletter as a valuable source of ideas and information. Please do send me material of any nature for inclusion. Don't worry about your journalistic skills everything will be of interest.

As you know – it will only be as good as the contributions from all members so can I encourage you to send me materials at any time of year for inclusion in the next edition.

I can be contacted on newsletter@thessba.org

The link to the SSBA website is here: www.thessba.org
If you are reading the newsletter electronically then this will take you to the site if you click on the web address. Alternatively type it into your web browser search box.

The newsletter is always interested to hear about events and exhibitions in your local area that we can advertise in the newsletter. You will also note that we have sections on artist profiles, small articles from members and Starting in Spring 2018 we propose to produce an annual Events schedule "What's on in 2018 " to give you an easy to use overview of what is coming up. You should have received an electronic copy of this or a paper one if you requested paper versions.

PLEASE, we really want to give you, the members, full value from the SSBA so would welcome any suggestions you have for future events, workshops garden visits and generally what you want us to provide for you (within reason). Contact me at the above e-mail with suggestions.

The annual SSBA dinner

This was again held at the Scottish Arts Club in Rutland Square Edinburgh. Although it was a chilly February night we had 31 members and their guests join us for a good evening of chat, food and the event of the night - "THE RAFFLE" which raised over £200. Due to changing data protection issues we have not included any photos of people who attended but the dining room look good.

REMINDER:

Flora Scotia exhibition including World Day of Botanical Art, 18 May 2018: we are delighted that a significant number of members have work being exhibited and/or included in the book being produced.

*The Flora Scotia Exhibition will open on Saturday 31st
March at 4:00 pm at the John Hope Gateway, RBGE.
There will be a 'private' opening event, and everyone who has been involved with the Flora Scotia project will be very welcome to attend.*

There will be another event on 18th May, the World Day of Botanical Art. This is also scheduled to start at around 4:00pm, and will then move on to Inverleith House for a splendid evening featuring the slideshow.

We are planning some activities around that weekend and at other points throughout the exhibition. More details will be available later.

The exhibition will end on 3rd June.

Acrylics workshop with Margaret Walty: 7th October 2018 at Queen Margaret University

Herewith below course requirements and suggestions (all prices are based on current prices and may change by October) from Margaret:

Everyone to bring their own pencils / mechanical pencils (preferably HB, B or 2B) and a sharpener if applicable, erasers, palettes and a plastic bag to store these in if taking a break (acrylics dry VERY quickly), and at least two pots each for water - which I hope is on tap at the venue?

Also a good idea to bring a sketchbook or practice paper of some kind to work out composition or tricky bits - and to keep under the hand to prevent smudging. If anyone is prone to splashing paint about, then an old shirt or apron is a good idea - acrylics will NOT wash out!

Acrylic paints: if people have these already, then please bring them but I'll be bringing mine anyway - they're expensive to buy unless people are sure they're going to be happy with them, there's such a huge range of colours, and I have my favourite combinations. I'm happy for people to use mine - a very small amount in the palette goes a long way.

Paper: for those who have a favourite paper, by all means bring it, but whatever the brand, I would recommend Hot Pressed and 640gsm. Otherwise I can bring the following, but would need to know quantities at least six weeks ahead:

- Fabriano Artistico Extra White Hot Pressed 640gsm is very good, not quite as smooth as it used to be but still very smooth, hard-sized so it can take a lot of pencil work and rubbing out. This is the paper I use most - a lovely paper.

Ruth Tait and Sarah Wylie elected to curate and present this exhibition, working with gallery staff to gain experience of working within a gallery environment.

I can supply this at £9 per 56 x 76cm sheet or £4.50 per half sheet.

- Saunders Waterford High White Hot Pressed 640gsm is also a beautiful paper which I'm experimenting with at the moment, slightly more textured than Fabriano, softer-sized so takes less reworking but stays wet a little longer, giving a little more time to play about before the paint dries.

I can supply this at £8 per 56 x 76cm sheet, £4 per half.

Favourite brushes: I'm assuming everyone has favourite brushes they can bring, but I would strongly advise a no.1 round pure sable and a no.5 or 6 ditto, with really good points - no.1 is particularly important. For anyone who needs to acquire them, I would suggest either Rosemary & Co Series 33 (see R & Co website) or Winsor & Newton Series 7.

I can supply no.1 brushes if necessary, but again would need to know six weeks ahead -: Rosemary & Co no.1 at £5 each and W & N no.1 at £10 each. If many of the latter are required I would also need payment in advance for them!

Also for payment in advance I can supply R & Co no.6 at £9 each or W & N no.6 at £42 (!). I find that R & Co brushes at the moment have a 3 out of 5 chance of coming to a perfect tip, W & N 9 out of 10.

It's also a good idea to bring an old, worn brush or two just to keep for paint mixing, so as not to wear out the tips of new brushes.

Masking fluid: a useful tool, along with a fine-nibbed mapping pen and old paintbrushes to apply it. I'll bring mine and a couple of mapping pens, but if everybody needed to use it at around the same time there could be a queue!

Models: early October should be a good time for interesting late flowers and autumn colour, and I would hope to be able to bring stuff from my garden and the surrounding countryside, but if people have something they particularly want to paint, then by all means bring it, in pot or vase or whatever. Moss, lichen, snail shells (preferably empty!), stones, feathers etc welcome as well !

the many visitors to this popular and busy café.

Our two 'Meet the Artists Days' were extremely popular and well attended, as was the 'Autumn Leaves Workshop' held for 6 – 14 year olds, where parents also joined in and tried their hands at drawing and colouring. Indeed so popular was this workshop, that an adult art class, who had come especially to see the exhibition, joined in as well.

We had a slightly smaller exhibition this year, with fewer paintings submitted than last, as a result of our dates coinciding with two important exhibitions in London. This unfortunately, resulted in some artists being unable to show with us.

Best Picture this year was awarded to Nicola Macartney for her beautiful Magnolia painting, with three Highly Commended Awards going to Lyn Campbell, Anne Rabbitts and Margaret Walty.

The People's Choice Award was won by Mary O'Neil for her painting of Orchids.

Artists Profile

We will be featuring botanical artists on a regular basis. All suggestions and contributions of profiles gratefully received newsletter@thessba.org

Lynsey Ewan <https://www.lynseyewan.co.uk>

This editions artist is Lynsey Ewan whom I selected having read an interesting article she wrote for The Rock Garden January 2018, the magazine for the Scottish Rock Gardening Club. The article came about because of a chance meeting between Lyndsey and the magazine editor during Perthshire Open Studios, where he was impressed by her paintings of snowdrops and foxgloves; images of which appear alongside the article.

Lynsey is a native of Scotland, brought up in rural Perthshire, Scotland, and qualified with a 2:1 degree in Fine Art from Duncan of Jordanstone College of Art & Design, (part of the University of Dundee) specialising in Drawing and Painting. She rented studio space for about 6 years at WASPS Dundee and suffered from bouts of mild depression, the treatment for which through complementary and alternative therapies has left her with a better understanding about how life happens, and helps her keep making art. There is a recurring theme of healthcare in her practice, including work in various hospital collection (see Art UK's website for example), and she has an ongoing interest in 'bigger picture' spirituality concepts. She has settled back in Perthshire working in her home studio, surrounded by trees.

Interests and Inspiration

A few key interests heavily influence her artwork – nature, health and spirituality. Aspects such as the air quality, energy and sounds is a multi-sensory feeling of nurturing and it brings her calmness. Whilst painting she often listen to mantra music or spiritual discourses that to focus the mind, this helps her consider the symbolism of the colour or form that she is painting. In her artwork, she hopes to instill that sense of oneness with nature and each other, that we are all connected – energetically, spiritually... whatever you want to call it.

The UAA was instrumental in the establishment of Taigh Chearsabhaigh Museum and Arts Centre, and continues to be involved in steering the running and development of this award-winning centre.

Lynsey seeks to bring a sense of being 'in the moment' to her paintings, where our fears dissolve and we experience joy. She expresses this through her interests in the influence of light within micro-environments, such as gardens and woodlands, where she spends much of her time.

Lynsey captures the brilliance and variety of colours that can be found in these places using a camera, which acts as a means of recording and preserving a precious moment in time so that the viewer can, perhaps, further appreciate the spectacular displays that nature provides in every moment. The camera is intentionally set out of focus to varying degrees, so that the colours meld into one another, allowing the light to dance around the images, revealing beautiful patterns and shapes. Lynsey's work, rather than being straightforward botanical studies, brings an ethereal quality to the imagery, pushing the viewer beyond their natural focal point into the peripheries and beyond. These works, painted right to the edges of the canvas, give a sense of expansion and being without boundaries.

A thought provoking insight from Marianne Hazlewood:

(Marianne is exhibiting at Pittenweem Arts Festival 2018 August 3rd to August 12th 2018. 10am – 5pm)

16/02/2018 - Who are you painting today?

Do you talk to your specimen? I heard an interesting article today on the RadioLab podcast – "Smarty Plants". As I have fairly recently become a vegetarian, I was slightly horrified, but also fascinated, so I thought I'd write it up for you to have a read...

The focus is the work of evolutionary ecologist Monica Gagliano who has developed various experiments with plants, to establish that some plants may have a propensity to learn and remember.

The essence of which is this; Monica wondered if Mimosa pudica, the sensitive plant could learn to respond differently with different levels of touch. Mimosa collapses its delicate bi-pinnate leaves up along the stem at the slightest brush, I remember my first experience with this plant, brought into our classroom and swiftly removed from the curious fingers of 10 year olds!

Monica set up experiments dropping water onto the leaves; after a time they became desensitised to the touch of the water drops and stopped closing, but were still extremely sensitive to any other touch.

Her supposition; that the Mimosa had learned to distinguish the touch and that the water drops were not harmful and thus it didn't need the protective response in this situation. This learned response was retained over an extended time. She was able to repeat this result of non-response for up to 28 days when the experiment ended. Is this a type of memory ?

In another experiment with Pea shoots, Monica set up a light source with a computer fan on one side of some pea shoots, she moved the light source and fan at intervals, each time the pea shoots leaned towards the light. Following this, she then removed the light source and simply moved the fan, the pea shoots then leaned towards the fan, 'hoping' that by doing so they might be rewarded with some light.

In response to Monica's claims of learned response and memory, contemporary scientists have warned of the unscientific propensity to anthropomorphisation, with these experiments, but is this a learned response, do you need to have a brain and a mind to learn and remember? I guess we must watch out for more work in this area to find out more...

Maybe we truly have intelligent plants/nay truffids in our midst? Who are you painting today? Maybe you could have a chat whilst you paint your plant portrait? And you could promise not to eat it... depending...

One of our many prizes is specifically geared towards Botanical Artists; the Still Life/Botanical Category Prize. Winning this prize will result in a huge amount of press and £500 in cash. Even if an artist doesn't win, there are plenty of opportunities to have their work seen by thousands during the promotion of the longlist and, before that, our weekly Commended Entries (so far, we've had Shinyoung Park, Benjamin Hassan, Emily Powell, and Frances Bell).

The entry cost is £5 per artwork and the prize is open to international artists. Submissions open on 3rd January 2018 and close on 16th March 2018.

Welcome to Dunkeld Art Exhibition 21st June - 31st August 2018

Now in its 48th year the Dunkeld Art Exhibition has been running for 10 weeks every summer to raise money for the upkeep of Dunkeld Cathedral. Artists from all over the UK show paintings, prints and sculptures and the exhibition attracts some 10,000 visitors each year. Successful artists of varying styles have found it to be a ready market for their works. The exhibition takes a 25% commission from the sales and, as a result, has been able to contribute regularly each year to the Cathedral funds. There is also a one pound hanging fee for each picture accepted. In 2017 we sold over 460 pieces of work to the total value of 34,300 and gave a donation of 9,000 to Cathedral funds. The exhibition takes over the 19th century Gothic Parish Hall, the Duchess Anne, which provides an attractive venue for some 400 works of art at any one time. Dunkeld is a well-known visitor centre and stopping-off point and the grouse and salmon seasons add to the number of interested art lovers. The Duchess Anne is situated in the Cross at the centre of Dunkeld. The exhibition closes on 31st August. Registration will open on 1st April 2018 and close on 31st May 2018

The Stirling Smith Art gallery and museum in Stirling, which has been open for 144 years and attracts 40,000 visitors a year is threatened with closure if proposals by Stirling Council to remove almost all its funding by 2023 are upheld. A petition against the cuts can be found at <http://chn.ge/2F3WYUd>

I hope you have enjoyed reading this Autumn newsletter. We look forward to receiving your contributions for the next edition. These can be sharing your studio, a book review, exhibition review, personal piece about your work or adventures in botanical art. I need all the help I can get in making this an interesting and on-going feature of the SSBA.

Please send them to newsletter@thessba.org by 23rd August 2018.
